

Suburban Propane and Historic Tours of America Unite to Support Lincolnville Museum and Cultural Center in Celebration of Black History Month

ST. AUGUSTINE, Fla., Feb. 1, 2024 /PRNewswire/ -- Suburban Propane Partners, L.P. (NYSE: SPH), a nationwide distributor of propane, renewable propane, renewable natural gas, fuel oil and related products and services, as well as a marketer of natural gas and electricity and investor in low carbon fuel alternatives, today partnered with Historic Tours of America to announce their support of the Lincolnville Museum and Cultural Center (LMCC) in St. Augustine, Florida in an effort to commemorate Black History Month and contribute to the preservation of African American history.

This joint initiative provides crucial funding to further the LMCC's mission of sharing the rich cultural heritage of St. Augustine's African American community through various channels, including art, educational programs, lectures, live performances, oral histories, and immersive exhibits. The LMCC is located in the Lincolnville Historic District, which was founded in 1866 by formerly enslaved people and stands in the town's most prominent historically black neighborhood.

In early February, the City will introduce an 80-foot trolley stop at the LMCC to facilitate easy access for visitors, including those traveling aboard Historic Tours of America's iconic orange and green Old Town Trolley Tours, enabling them to explore the museum. The Lincolnville District holds significant historical importance, as it has played a pivotal role in the City's early development and the Nation's Civil Rights Movement.

Established in 1565, St. Augustine is the United States' oldest continuously inhabited settlement, representing both European and African-American heritage. Preceding Jamestown by 42 years and Plymouth Rock by 55 years, the Spanish-founded St. Augustine stands as the nation's first enduring settlement.

"At Suburban Propane, we believe in the power of preserving and sharing diverse cultural histories," said Nandini Sankara, spokesperson, Suburban Propane. "Our collaboration with the Lincolnville Museum and Cultural Center aligns with our SuburbanCares commitment to support initiatives that celebrate and educate on the vibrant heritage of the communities in which we operate."

"We are honored to join forces with Suburban Propane to support the Lincolnville Museum and Cultural Center," said Piper Smith, Vice President of Marketing, Historic Tours of America. "Through this collaboration, we aim to contribute to the vibrant culture of St. Augustine and highlight the impact of African American history on the nation's oldest continuously inhabited settlement."

About LincolNville Museum and Cultural Center:

The LincolNville Museum and Cultural Center (LMCC) is an African American history museum located in the LincolNville neighborhood of Saint Augustine, FL. The LMCC's mission is to preserve, promote and perpetuate over 450 years of the African American story through the arts, educational programs, lectures, live performances, and exhibits.

The museum is housed in the historic Excelsior School Building, which served as the first public Black high school in Saint Johns County in 1925. After desegregation, the school was closed and the building housed government offices until the mid 1980s. After the offices were phased out of use, a group of former Excelsior students and community members rallied to save the building from demolition.
